Author note 12/27/2014: This book has been extensively revised in response to reader comments.

Reporters Louie Huey and Chloe Robertson won a Pulitzer Prize in 2025 for an investigation that uncovered transhumans were being created by downloading human brains into powerful quantum computers, which they chronicled in their best-selling book, Plagiarized. Five years later, they team up again to investigate reports of high school cheerleaders suddenly becoming verbally abusive, speaking in strange languages, performing lewd sex acts, disclosing intimate secrets, and acting out violently. Are the cheerleaders demonically possessed? Or is there a more rational explanation for these episodes? As they search for the truth, Huey and Robertson find that reality is more complicated than they could have imagined. The answer causes them to reach a terrifying conclusion: no one is immune from the forces of evil in 2030. Possessed is a work of fiction. Yet it forewarns us of a dystopian future when we can no longer trust our own minds. As Winston Churchill once put it, "The empires of the future are the empires of the mind."
