This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

Raina learned to operate a vehicle before her feet could reach the pedals. As the sole caretaker of her chronically ill mother, the eleven-year-old often misses school so that she can fold laundry, pick up the groceries, and drive her mom to the hospital.

Together they are a united front. Raina knows exactly what to do and what not to do when her mother is in pain, and she's sure that she has everything under control. But when she faces a crisis she can't handle, Raina has to make a tough decision—and succumb to the dictates of someone who knows so much less but ultimately has the final, devastating say.

Honest and unsentimental, Driving Lessons is the story of a child discovering her powerlessness amid the whims of the adults in charge.
