Polly is a powerful being now, far too powerful for a thirteen-year-old girl. She has learned that “things” that go “bump” in the night are not always tree limbs blowing against the side of a house. In Comes a Gathering, book 3 of the series, Polly finds one vampire is bad enough, but a gathering is a family of vampires! She wields a power she can barely comprehend and has been charged by those as do mentor her, “Do not engage violent adults, you are too young, in here”—a finger gently indicates her chest above her heart—“and in here”—that self-same finger gently touches her forehead. So it is that the Mistress of the Night, who is instructing her, cautions her.
